

Amy Jackson
Fine Art Nature Photography

Amy Jackson has been a professional photographer since 1987 and has been showing her work publicly since 2000. Jackson is originally from Georgia, and now resides in Maryland. A focus of her work is Nature photography, a very popular series with galleries and art collectors alike.

Jackson's 35 mm color photographs are taken in botanical gardens, nurseries, national parks, and on location in Puerto Rico and Jamaica.

In 2007, Jackson earned a commission from Philips Home-lab in Eindhoven, The Netherlands, to capture photographs audio and video in Puerto Rico ~ resulting in a multitude of lush, sensual and highly varied images from El Yunque National Rainforest, and sun-filled landscapes from six beaches on Vieques, an island off the coast of Puerto Rico.

The commissioned media now serves as the content for JungleScape, an Enhanced Protoquadro ~ an ever-changing digital painting housed in the Shoplab at Philips' research campus in Eindhoven.

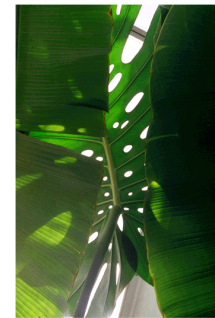

Throughout the Nature series, Jackson's eye finds the erotic and the geometric, as well as the delicate and diverse interactions between plants ~ driven by a spirit that celebrates the primal pulse of life through tropical plants and their environment.

Selections from the series have been the focus of two solo shows since 2002 in The Netherlands and Maryland, including the above-mentioned multimedia collaboration with colleagues in The Netherlands (www.submultimedia.tv).
